Betty Currie

January 5, 1998

Lewinsky meets with attorney Carter for an hour; Carter drafts an Affidavit for Lewinsky in an attempt to avert her deposition testimony in Jones v. Clinton scheduled for January 23, 1998.

Lewinsky telephones Currie stating that she needs to speak to The President about an important matter; specifically that she was anxious about something she needed to sign- an Affidavit.

The President returns Lewinsky's call; Lewinsky mentions the Affidavit she'd be signing; Lewinsky offers to show the Affidavit to The President who states that he doesn't need to see it because he has already seen about fifteen others.
