WASHINGTON, D.C. – House Republican Leader John Boehner named Congressman Jim Saxton the senior House Republican member on the Joint Economic Committee (JEC), a selection that under JEC rules and procedures leads to a designation as ranking Republican of the full Committee.

"I thank Leader Boehner for this appointment, and appreciate his confidence in my leadership," Saxton said. "I'm looking forward to an active two years focusing on continuation of the economic expansion, monetary policy, pro-growth tax policy, restraint of federal spending, energy policy, and reform of the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and the World Bank," Saxton concluded.

The JEC consists of members from both the U.S. House and Senate.
